

My results from the mindset quiz were not a surprise. I've had a growth mindset for almost a decade. There was a point in middle school where I had this epiphany in math class that I could actually do anything if I put my mind to it. This led down a path where I began to push my boundaries to see what I was actually capable of doing. I didn't get a perfect score on the mindset quiz because there are things that I currently believe are fixed, like intelligence. I'm not saying people can't learn, but I think things like IQ tend to be fixed. However, I'm still open minded to research that contradicts that belief. My outlook moving forward is probably the same as it was when I started this class. I know that if I try hard enough, I will learn, and that is the goal.